

Fact sheet

Leaving your job at the Qantas Group?

Moving into another stage of life can be both exciting and challenging at the same time.

Good news! Even if you're not going to be working for the Qantas Group, you can stay with Qantas Super. And that means you have access to the following member benefits.

High standards, lower fees

Rest assured, you'll pay competitive fees that are lower than the industry average¹.

It's all about you

Because we don't profit from our members, we don't use your super savings to pay commissions or keep shareholders happy. Quite simply, all our profits go back to our members.

Keep track wherever, whenever

View your balance, manage your investments and update your details online, anytime.

Sound financial advice

We provide access to professional advice from licensed financial advisers, either face-to-face or over the phone.

Qantas travel perks

On top of any Qantas travel benefits you've accrued, you can look forward to additional discounts on cruises and tours.

Stay at your best

Your family receive complimentary Best Doctors membership. An internationally-recognised service that gives you access to leading medical specialists.

What's this about?

- You can stay with Qantas Super even if you stop working for the Qantas Group
- You can get access to the suite of member benefits
- Your super will transfer into Qantas Super's Gateway division
- Call us with any questions

It's all done for you

Once you stop working for the Qantas Group, you'll automatically become a retained member of Qantas Super's Gateway Division. And you can stay with Qantas Super for as long as you want (with a balance of at least $5,000).

Qantas Super was created to look after the super savings of Qantas employees and their spouses. So you can stay with a fund that gets who you are, and where you've come from.

Already in Qantas Super's Gateway Division?

Here's what stays the same

- Your member number
- Your PIN for logging into your account
- Your fees and costs
- The investment option your super is invested in, and the options you can choose from
- The people you've nominated as your beneficiaries
- The dollar amount of your insurance cover for death and total and permanent disablement
- Your insurance premiums.

Here's what will be different

- Your default insurance cover becomes a fixed dollar amount (instead of being based on your salary)
- Your income protection cover will stop 90 days after you stop working for the Qantas Group.

What to know how much super you've got?

Check your balance by logging into your Qantas Super account online.

In another Qantas Super division?

- You'll get a brand new account in Qantas Super's Gateway Division, and your super balance will be transferred into this account
- You'll get a new PIN to log into your new account
- Fees and costs for Gateway will apply
- Your super will be invested in the investment options you've already chosen. If you haven't chosen an option, your super will be invested in the default option for Gateway. And if you're in a defined benefit division, you'll now be able to choose your investment option for all your super
- You can change your investment option at any time – and you'll have access to the same investment options as you do now
- The dollar amount of insurance cover you have for death and total and permanent disablement will carry across. Your income protection cover stops.
- Insurance premiums for Gateway will apply to your insurance cover. Some of you don't currently pay insurance premiums or you may only pay a portion, so it's important to check the cost
- The people you've nominated as your beneficiaries will carry across to your new account.

Ready for the time of your life?

If you're ready to cut down your hours or stop working altogether and enjoy everything life has to offer, you can move into a Qantas Super Income Account and receive a regular income from the super saved throughout your career. Call us or go to our website to find out more.
