QANTAS SUPER ANNOUNCES RETIREMENT OF CEO

SYDNEY June 26, 2015

Qantas Super today announced that the fund's CEO, Jane Perry, will retire at the end of 2015, bringing to a close an extraordinary career in financial services.

Qantas Super Chairman, Anne Ward, said Ms Perry, who joined the fund early in 2012, had brought the benefit of her extensive experience in financial services and management, along with a clear vision and an unwavering focus on positive outcomes for members.

"Jane has steered Qantas Super strategically through a period of unprecedented regulatory and industry change with care and distinction," Ms Ward said.

"Jane's many achievements at Qantas Super include the implementation of the Stronger Super suite of initiatives, the successful transition of more than 32,000 member accounts to a new plan administrator, the appointment of an external insurer to provide standard insurance benefits and day-to-day management of insurance claims, and a concerted and coordinated drive to increase member engagement. Qantas Super was also named first of 47 funds for its risk-adjusted investment returns for the default option for the last financial year.

"During her tenure, Qantas Super has been named a SuperRatings 'Rising Star' finalist twice, has achieved a Gold rating three years in a row, and has twice been named a finalist in the ASFA Communications Awards.

"Jane is a rare leader who leads by positive example, honesty and transparency. The Board and her team will miss her enormously, but wish her and her husband, Bob, well for a long and adventurous retirement.

“On behalf of the Board and all Qantas Super members, I’d like to thank Jane for her extraordinary commitment to the fund and to her team,” Ms Ward said.

Ms Ward said the Board would now commence an executive search for a replacement CEO.
